Living history

Tallinn, named Lonely Planet's Best Value Destination of 2018, is an amazing blend of old and new. The world-famous Old Town was largely constructed between the 13th and 16th centuries and is a designated UNESCO World Heritage Site. Tallinn is a city with roots back in the Bronze Age— first settlements in Tallinn have been found to be built approximately 2500BC. Tallinn has been governed by Danes, Swedes, Russians and now Estonians. Its cityscape is as varied as its history— from stone and wooden houses dating back several hundred years to Soviet-era warrens and modern skyscrapers. In the heart of Tallinn lies the Old Town, which was first mentioned in 1154. To the southeast, the buzzing business center is located, and to the northwest lie the romantic wooden houses areas. So walking through Tallinn is like walking through several hundred years of history with a splash of modern life added in as well. Tallinn is home to over 50 museums and numerous art galleries. Most famous is probably KUMU Art Museum, located in Kadriorg. In KUMU, visitors can get a quick overview of Estonian art, both traditional and modern. KUMU is located in Kadriorg Park, which is also home to the President of Estonia living at Kadriorg Palace. Kadriorg is considered to be one of the most beautiful parks in Estonia, originally built by Russian czar Peter I in 1718.

If you want more information about what to do in Tallinn, you can either visit the webpage <http://www.visittallinn.ee> or the tourist information center at Viru Center. In order to make the most of your experience in Tallinn, consider getting the Tallinn Card, which features free entrance to museums, free sightseeing tours and City transport, and also discounts in various facilities. More information about the card can be found at <https://www.visittallinn.ee/est/tallinncard>

DINING OUT

Hungry? Not a problem.

Hungry? Not a problem. Finding an interesting, affordable place to eat in Tallinn is easy, especially given the culinary boom the city has seen in the last few years. The bigger challenge will be figuring out what kind of restaurant you are in the mood for: traditional Estonian, cutting edge fusion, African, Thai or maybe something with a medieval theme... the list goes on. Tallinn's bigger pubs and cafes also offer full-fledged meals ranging from simple meat-and-potato dishes to elaborate salads and pastas. Most of the City's restaurants are clustered in and around the Old Town, and nearly all have English menus and English-speaking staff.

Here are just a few examples of the restaurants in Tallinn from the culinary master book White Guide Nordic Global Master Level.

WHITE GUIDE NORDIC GLOBAL MASTER LEVEL RESTAURANTS:

- Noa Chef's Hall
- Ö

There are six Masters Level restaurants in Tallinn. These restaurants must receive minimum 75 points in total and at least 32 points of them for food.
